The Tough Cops of APD

Easter Leafa will forever be 16 year old, because that's how old she was when the Anchorage police department killed her.

[1] The Tough Cops of APD

Use of deadly force to try to stem the crime epidemic in Anchorage, Alaska, has gotten so out of control that cops didn't hesitate recently to use deadly force on a 16-year-old girl brandishing a steak knife, surrounded by family in her home. Police were called by her sister who reported Easter Leafa was threatening her and had a knife. When APD Officers commanded Leafa to drop the knife she didn't do it fast enough, so they shot her dead.

Body cam footage has not been released yet.

They say she was BIG and SCARY!

New Mayor Apologizes for Teen Girl Killed by Police

Six Officer Involved Shootings in Anchorage so far this year—four deadly. This one caused the newly elected Mayor Suzanne LaFrance to question local police professionalism. Even the dumbest cop on the force should know this mayor and assembly don't support community policing and would like to replace the police force with woke social workers using water pistols and sippy cups of warm milk.

The bureaucracy now has 45 days to review and justify body cam recordings of this event before they must be made public. The overwhelmed AK Courts will likely fumble the ball around for job security, but a recent 9th Circuit Court ruling should provide clear direction in prosecution of trigger-happy cops.

Body Cams Will Likely Provide Necessary Evidence.

According to a police statement officers responded to a call reporting that someone was threatening others with a knife inside an apartment. When officers arrived and the girl did not drop the knife, two officers opened fire. The girl was then taken to the hospital where she was pronounced dead.

A family witness told NBC NEWS:

...Leafa's English was not very strong, and when the police ordered her to drop the knife she was holding downward by her side, they said it didn't take much for the officers to shoot.

"She made one movement, a little tiny movement," Rosalie Tialavea, Leafa's oldest sister said. "They shot her three times. ... They saw her go down on the second shot and they had to fire another one."

Another resident experiencing personal crisis, Christopher Handy was gunned down August 13, 2024 by tough APD cops who lied about what happened, embarrassing their boss at a press conference.

Video Catches Cops in a LIE

APD officers are recently required to wear body cameras to record encounters during law enforcement duties, but the public has learned individuals with cell phones MUST assure events involving APD are recorded independently for protection against misrepresentation of facts.

Body Cams Can Be Pointed the Wrong Way; Cops Will Lie.

Proof: After the APD press conference the morning of the Handy event, the lie that a gun had been raised toward four responding officers had to be later revised, when independent video contradicted it.

Like Shooting Fish in a Barrel

What is known: Agitated Anchorage resident Christopher Handy was killed by APD officers for waving a long gun around the stairway and yard of the apartment complex at the 7100 block of Bearfoot Drive. Police were called because a neighbor heard what she believed was a domestic violence altercation. Arriving police are recorded issuing conflicting orders to a shirtless Handy standing outside.

Body cam footage from the event corroborated the independent video showing the long gun was never raised or pointed toward APD officers.

Where is the investigative report regarding the Handy

Execution? Where are the statements from the tough

APD Cops who fired their guns at this person in distress?

[6] Officer Involved Shooting of Christopher Handy Investigation Report on the 7100-block of Bearfoot Drive, August 13, 2024

This misrepresentation is a critical component of whether deadly force was justified in the summary execution of Handy having a mental illness episode. The recent 9th Circuit Court Opinion June 7, is called Calonge v City of San Jose.

In that case, the cop who killed Calonge was allowed qualified immunity from legal consequences of this act.

A once great place to bring a young family.

In Calonge, three officers gave mixed directives to a person in San Jose, CA walking down the street with a bb pistol in his waistband. Ultimately the cops shot and killed Calonge although he did not pose any immediate threat to their safety or the safety of others. They believed him to be armed and he did not respond to their mixed commands.

The 9th Circuit has ruled that an immediate threat might be a furtive movement, a harrowing gesture, or serious verbal threat. Additionally, at no time was Calonge warned that deadly force would be used before he was shot dead, making this unreasonable use of force in line with other 9th Circuit caselaw.

Lesson: Just because someone has a gun doesn't mean law enforcement officials can fire first—there has to be some immediacy, such as aiming the gun toward somebody.

Troubled AK Woman Scares Muldoon Neighbors

Initial indications are that an interaction occurred outside between the adult female suspect, who was armed with a long gun, and an unarmed neighborhood resident. The suspect's actions put that resident in fear of immediate physical harm. The suspect retreated into her home prior to police arrival; she was the only one inside.

The patrol officers who initially responded to the call made several unsuccessful attempts to contact the suspect and have her exit her house. Police obtained an arrest warrant for the charge of Assault III; SWAT, TSU, and CNT responded to the scene. Some area residents evacuated from their homes. Negotiators made multiple attempts at contacting the suspect. SWAT used several different tactics, to include gas deployment, to encourage the suspect's cooperation with the commands she was being given. The suspect remained non-compliant and fired multiple shots inside the home.

Ultimately one SWAT officer discharged their weapon from outside. During a subsequent search of the residence, officers located the deceased suspect inside. The Medical Examiner will determine the cause of death.

Consider these facts: Lisa-M. Fordyce-Blair brandished a gun outside her home in an altercation with a neighbor, then retreated into her home. She then shot her gun inside her home. Police showed up and ordered her out of her home. She didn't come out so police SWAT shot her in her home.

Two Scary Fairview Guys with Guns

According to the APD Report: At 9:30 PM on June 3, 2024, Anchorage Police responded to the area of E 19th Avenue and Karluk Street regarding reports of shots being fired in the neighborhood. Upon the officers' arrival, a passerby indicated that two adult males in the parking lot at 1300 E 19th Avenue were involved in firing the shots. Officers verbally engaged Male #1 and Male #2. Male #1 was compliant and taken into custody; he was armed with a handgun.

Male #2 was not compliant. As he reached into his clothing a K9 was deployed. While the K9 had hold of Male #2, Male #2 produced a handgun and ignored multiple commands to drop it. Three officers discharged their weapons, striking Male #2 in the upper body. He was declared deceased at the scene. Neither the K9 nor any officers were injured.

The report does not reveal whether 21-year-old Tyler May threatened the police with his weapon but the fact he was believed to have already discharged it likely gives law enforcement grounds to use lethal force.

Alaska is now the Wild West where nobody is safe. As Alaska's largest city Anchorage has become a dangerous place but by their own account, serious efforts by APD and other agencies to address lawlessness can result in amazing results—over only two days! Perhaps addressing the out-of-control crime could mitigate the desperation and criminal ideation overwhelming much of Alaska.

[3] Anchorage Police Department Releases Updated Draft of the Body Worn Cameras Policy
<https://www.anchoragopolice.com/news/anchorage-police-department-releases-updated-draft-of-the-body-worn-cameras-policy>

Anchorage, AK — On July 12, 2024, the Anchorage Police Department (APD) has released an updated draft of the Body-Worn Cameras (BWC) policy.

The updated policy aims to balance the public desire for police accountability with the practical and legal challenges associated with officer-involved shootings, referenced in the policy as “Critical Incidents.”

The policy requires the release of BWC video to the public within 45 days of a “Critical Incident.” The policy also outlines a streamlined process for the family members of a deceased individual to view the video before its public release, in recognition of the loss they have suffered and their need for information and answers.

The Chief of Police retains the discretion to delay the public release of the video for specific reasons, such as preserving the integrity of an ongoing investigation or safeguarding the constitutional rights of the accused. Under the policy, case-specific reasons for any delay will be explained in a detailed public statement.

“The Anchorage Police Department is committed to improving our relationship with the Anchorage community,” said Chief Case. “This policy reflects our commitment to public safety and open communication with the public.”

MEMORANDUM*

Appeal from the United States District Court for the Northern District of California
Nathanael M. Cousins, Magistrate Judge, Presiding

Argued and Submitted November 17, 2023
San Jose, California

Before: MURGUIA, Chief Judge, and PAEZ and FRIEDLAND, Circuit Judges.

* This disposition is not appropriate for publication and is not precedent except as provided by Ninth Circuit Rule 36-3.

In a concurrently filed opinion we hold that Officer Carboni is not entitled to qualified immunity on Ms. Calonge's Fourth Amendment claim. In this memorandum disposition we address Ms. Calonge's Fourteenth Amendment claim against Officer Carboni and her California state law claims against Officer Carboni and the City of San Jose.

The district court held that Officer Carboni was entitled to qualified immunity on the Fourteenth Amendment claim and therefore granted summary judgment in his favor. Having resolved both federal law claims, the district court then declined to exercise jurisdiction over the remaining state law claims and dismissed them without prejudice.

1. Because we reverse as to the Fourth Amendment claim, we also reverse the district court's dismissal of the state law claims.¹

2. We affirm the district court's grant of summary judgment on the Fourteenth Amendment claim. Parents have a "Fourteenth Amendment liberty interest in the companionship and society of their children." Wilkinson v. Torres, 610 F.3d 546, 554 (9th Cir. 2010). That interest extends to adult children. Johnson v. Bay Area Rapid Transit Dist., 724 F.3d 1159, 1169 (9th Cir. 2013). Government action that deprives a parent of that liberty interest violates the due process guarantee of the Fourteenth Amendment if it “shocks the conscience.”

Porter v. Osborn, 546 F.3d 1131, 1137 (9th Cir. 2008).

The standard for determining whether conduct shocks the conscience varies based on the circumstances. Where “actual deliberation is practical,” the question is whether the government actor was deliberately indifferent. County of Sacramento v. Lewis, 523 U.S. 833, 851 (1998). Actual deliberation is practical where there are “extended opportunities to do better,” such as when a person is held in “normal pretrial custody.” Id. at 851, 853. By contrast, actual deliberation is not practical where “unforeseen circumstances demand an officer’s instant judgment,” such as when “prison officials [are] facing a riot” or where police are involved in “high-speed chases.” Id. 853-54. Those situations call for “fast action” and implicate “obligations that tend to tug against each other.” Id. at 853. There, the question is whether the government actor had a “purpose to harm,” a “more demanding” standard than deliberate indifference. Porter, 546 F.3d at 1137.

Ms. Calonge contends that Officer Carboni actually deliberated before shooting her son because three seconds passed between when he warned the other police officers and when he fired. But the Supreme Court has cautioned that “actual deliberation” in the Fourteenth Amendment context does not mean “‘deliberation’ in the narrow, technical sense in which it has sometimes been used in traditional homicide law.” Lewis, 523 U.S. at 851 n.11. We have held that a five-minute encounter that was “quickly evolving” did not allow for actual deliberation for Fourteenth Amendment purposes. Porter, 546 F.3d at 1139. The circumstances of this case likewise did not allow for actual deliberation within the meaning of the Fourteenth Amendment inquiry. The relevant question is therefore not whether Officer Carboni was deliberately indifferent, but whether he had a purpose to harm Calonge.

A government actor has a purpose to harm when his intent is “to inflict force beyond that which is required by a legitimate law enforcement objective.” Id. at 1140 (quoting Davis v. Township of Hillside, 190 F.3d 167, 172 (3d Cir. 1999) (McKee, J., concurring)). Legitimate law enforcement objectives include “arrest, self-defense, or the defense of others.” A.D. v. Cal. Highway Patrol, 712 F.3d 446, 454 (9th Cir. 2013). The inquiry is subjective: The officer’s intent must be to inflict unjustified force. Id. at 453.

Ms. Calonge has not presented evidence that Office Carboni had a subjective intent to do anything other than to further legitimate law enforcement objectives. Officer Carboni testified that he fired his rifle because he thought Calonge was reaching for the gun in his waistband and might take bystanders hostage. Although Officer Carboni may have been tragically and unreasonably mistaken, his testimony is facially plausible as to his subjective beliefs, and Ms. Calonge has not offered evidence that contradicts it. Because there is no evidence from which a reasonable jury could conclude that Officer Carboni had a purpose to harm, we conclude that Officer Carboni's actions did not violate the Fourteenth Amendment. He is therefore entitled to qualified immunity on that claim.

The parties shall bear their own costs on appeal.
